

PRINCE GEORGE'S COUNTY

HISTORIC SITE SUMMARY SHEET

Survey #: P.G. #82A-5 Building Date: late 19th century

Building Name: Dr. Frederick Sasscer Tenant House and Outbuildings

Location: 6201 Croom Station Road, Upper Marlboro, Maryland 20772

Private/Residence/Occupied/Fair/Inaccessible

Description:

The Dr. Frederick Sasscer Tenant House is a two-story frame dwelling, two-by-three bays, rectangular in plan with a gable roof and a front cross gable. It is situated on a small hill facing Croom Station Road to the north. It is in a rural setting, surrounded by trees. Added to the rectangular main block of the building is a one-story, gable roof south kitchen wing and a one-story east addition. The three-bay north (main) facade has a central entrance flanked by two 6/6 windows. Both entrance and windows have a plain wood surround. There is a one-story, three-bay entrance porch across the facade which rests on cement piers. The hipped, standing seam metal porch roof rests on wooden posts. There is a central cross gable at the attic story. The house has interior corbelled brick chimneys at the east and west gable ends. It is covered with asphalt shingle siding, rests on a cement foundation, and has a patterned tin roof with a plain, boxed wood cornice. Immediately west of the house are three barns. The north and southmost appear to be of 20th century construction. The center barn has a gable roof with shallowly sloped roof extensions on the north and south sides. The center section of the building, under the gable ridge, is supported on brick piers and the sills and major structural timbers appear hand hewn.

Significance:

The Dr. Frederick Sasscer Tenant House and Outbuildings are situated on a part of what was the 306 acre Sasscer farm, called "The Meadows." The property was owned by members of the Sasscer family from 1854 through 1969. In 1945 the property was described as containing the main dwelling, five tenant houses, four barns, one cow or tobacco barn, one granary and one stable. One tenant house and its three barns are of concern here. The tenant house appears on the 1894 Hopkins map of the vicinity of Washington, D.C., but not on the 1878 Hopkins map. The house is typical of late nineteenth century vernacular farmhouses built in this County. Characteristics it shares with other farmhouses built during the period include its two-story, frame gable roof construction; central cross gable on the main facade; facade-wide one-story entrance porch and austerity in further architectural detail.

Prepare both a summary paragraph and a general description of the resource and its various elements as it exists today.

The Dr. Frederick Sasscer Tenant House is a two-story frame dwelling, two-by-three bays, rectangular in plan with a gable roof and a front cross gable. It is situated on a small hill facing Croom Station Road to the north. It is in a rural setting, surrounded by trees, with fields to its south, east and west. Attached to the rectangular main block of the building is a one-story, gable roof south kitchen wing and a one-story east addition.

The three-bay north (main) facade has a central entrance flanked by two 6/6 double hung sash windows. Both the entrance and the windows have a plain wood surround. There is a one-story, three-bay entrance porch across the facade. The porch rests on cement piers and the hipped, standing seam metal porch roof rests on wooden posts. There is a central cross gable at the attic story.

The house has interior corbelled brick chimneys at the east and west gable ends. It is covered with asphalt shingle siding, rests on a cement foundation, and has a patterned tin roof with a plain, boxed wood cornice.

Centered on the south (rear) facade of the main block is a two-by one bay, one-story, gable roof, wing with a corbelled brick interior chimney at its south gable ridge. It rests on a cement foundation and has the same wall, cornice and roof treatment as the main structure. The east one-by-one-bay, shed-roof addition is also covered with asphalt shingle. It is set on high cement block piers and its east side entrance is reached by wooden steps.

Immediately west of the house are three barns. The barn to the north-west of the house, closest to Croom Station Road, has a standing-seam metal gable roof. There are four large semi-octagonal entrances on the east facade. The sills and structural posts rest on cement piers and the barn appears to be of 20th century construction.

The barn directly west of the house has a gable roof with shallow extensions on the north and south sides. The center section of the building, under the gable ridge, is supported on brick piers while the outer sections, to the north and south, are supported on cement blocks. The sills and major structural timbers appear hand hewn. There are both wire nails and machine cut nails in the structure.

The barn to the south of the house has board and batten siding and rests on cement piers. Its orientation is toward the house, as is that of the other two barns. The north and south facades are five-bays, composed of five evenly spaced small square openings.

The house and outbuildings are buffered from the road and surrounding fields by trees. The enclosing trees and the hilliness of the surrounding yard give the site a small, well defined environmental setting.
